Explanation on the use of conflict materials

January 2016

Dear Sirs,

We are currently receiving a large amount of enquiries concerning the use of conflict materials related to the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, which came into force in 2010. This reform imposes documentation/publication regulations on companies that use certain materials; these regulations are to ensure that no conflict material is used in their products.

We would hereby like to inform you, as customers of DILO Armaturen und Anlagen GmbH, that we use exclusively electronic parts and components from renowned manufacturers and suppliers in our products. However, as an end device manufacturer, we have no decisive influence on the origin of minerals used by other companies that lie far before us in the supply chain. Thus we cannot assume any express liability for their origin.

We seek to ensure the traceability and transparency of our suppliers' products and have taken corresponding measures for this purpose. We have obtained corresponding information from the most important suppliers and according to our current knowledge no conflict material from the affected regions is used by any of our suppliers. Our company does not activate any direct imports of the materials concerned from the affected countries. We can thus confirm that, according to our current knowledge, no conflict material is contained in our products.

Please note that due to the heavy increase in the number of enquiries regarding this matter, we are no longer able to fill in a special questionnaire in each individual case. We hope to have hereby provided you, our customers, with the desired information and we thank you for your trust and our collaboration with you.

Kind regards

DILO
